

The Alligator Snapping Turtle is often covered with algae, which disguises it amongst murky river and lake bottoms. It hunts by lying motionless with its mouth open, as its worm-shaped tongue wiggles in the water, luring unsuspecting prey to a snappy death.